Truck maintenance tips that can save you money.

A 2016 study by MacKay and Company found that the average truck requires an average of $20,600 parts and services costs per year. Since then, the pandemic and growth of e-commerce has put more miles on trucks and increased maintenance costs.

Add a breakdown and you incur emergency service costs, towing expenses, driver downtime, and unhappy customers.

Industry experts estimate that an out-of-service vehicle costs a fleet $850-$1,000 per day.

The good news? Regularly scheduled preventative maintenance can address many of those costs. In fact, addressing just 35% of predicted issues could save a fleet up to $490 per truck per year.

The type of repairs being made most often are tires, lubrication, starting and charging systems, brakes, suspension, coolant systems, and exhaust after treatment systems.

BRAKE MAINTENANCE.

Checking brakes and brake strokes can prevent downtime and possibly safety issues. Pay special attention to calipers, guide pins, and brake pad wear. Also, vehicles built to the federal reduced stopping distance (RSD) standard must have RSD-rated replacement materials. Low-quality replacement parts may not always make the grade.

LUBRICATION MAINTENANCE.

Properly lubricating components can prevent premature failure of u-joints, kingpins, and other costly parts. Even extended life components designed with no grease fittings eventually need to have a grease fitting installed and a normal lubricant regimen. Perform a 'dry' preventive maintenance check between oil changes to get the vehicle lubricated properly.

TIRE MAINTENANCE.

Matching up tires and checking tire pressure can help reduce excessive wear reducing the overall cost of tires. The U.S. National Highway Safety Administration (NHTSA) reported that blowouts, bald tires, tread separation, and improper inflation cause one in every 11 crashes. Out-of-balance tires are responsible for some driver health problems: vibration shock from travels through the steering shaft, stressing the tendons of those holding on to the wheel. Underinflated tires also leak money. According to the U.S. Department of Energy, properly inflated tires can save you as much as 3.3% in fuel costs.

Truck maintenance tips that can save you money. Cont'd.

SUSPENSION MAINTENANCE.

During every maintenance, be sure to check...

- For signs of uneven wear.
- That nothing is interfering or coming into contact with the suspension.
- That the pressure of air springs is equal on both sides

EXHAUST AFTERTREATMENT SYSTEM MAINTENANCE.

Avoid upstream issues in aftertreatment systems that can decrease fuel efficiency and cause excessive buildup in DPF filters. Regularly clean DPF filters and find any underlying cause of coolant loss. Replacing those filters can be costly: up to several thousand dollars per filter.

STARTING AND CHARGING SYSTEM MAINTENANCE.

Remembering to check battery connections and cables at every maintenance can prevent starter and alternator failures. The majority of starter and alternator failures are a result of bad connections and corroded cables.

COOLANT SYSTEM MAINTENANCE.

A large amount of major engine failures are due to poor coolant system maintenance. Coolant refractometers can help prevent costly maintenance.

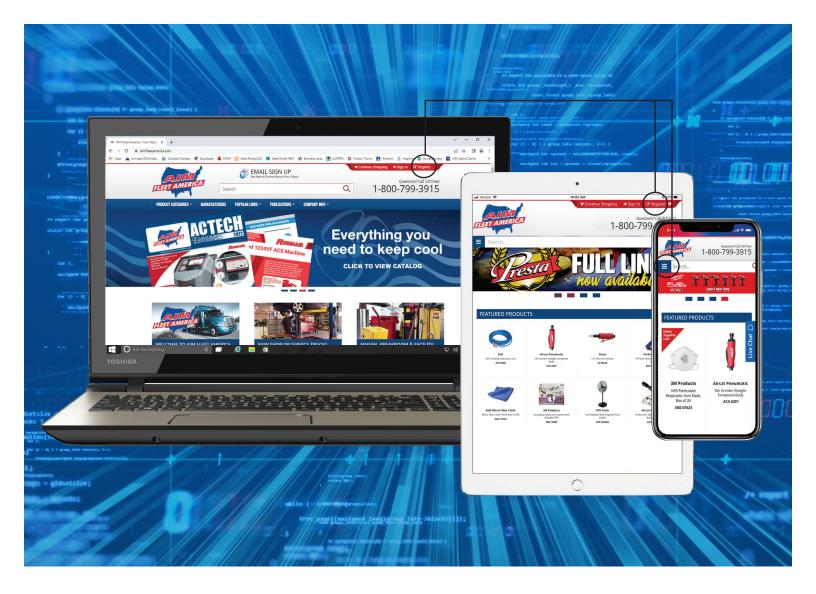

DRIVER CHECKLIST

Save money by catching problems early. Drivers know their trucks better than anyone, and can spot potential problems earlier, too.

Drivers should regularly:

- Perform the on-the-road brake inspections.
- · Check tires.
- Monitor wear on windshield wipers.
- Note any damage to the truck body, especially mirrors.
- Report any driving issues, like screeching brakes or rough idling, as well as any uneven wear or other issues noted during on-the-road inspections.
- Make sure the truck is cleaned every six weeks, so that any potential problems aren't disguised by dirt.
